

Lethal Lover

You seduced me long before you became my lover.
Whispering into my ear promises that were to become my doom.
I gave you my strengths, you kissed back with weaknesses.
I gave you my all!

You lived within my core, my darkest corner
Gently, gently caressing me until,
I couldn't bear to be without you.
I let you take my pride, my dignity and morals.
You wrapped me in shame.
I gave you my all!

You knew my past, and held my future in your palm.
I suffered the exile from others, cried for my loss.
You encouraged and moulded me to hurt and not love.
Still I craved your touch.
I gave you my all!

You stopped caressing me. Your kisses became slaps.
I forgave you and begged you to stay.
You convinced me that I needed your control.
I surrendered my hope.
I gave you my all!

Your violence increased, until I shared it with others.
I hid your bruises convincing myself you cared and helped me.
You smothered my feelings
I needed the blackness
I gave you my all!

You made yourself my world.
I gave you my own, my health, my will and sanity.
You lapped it all greedily
Still wanting more.
I gave you my all!

You subdued me long ago
I can take no more.
Your caresses hurt too much,
Your kisses cause me pain.
I can give you no more!
